Taking Action to End Poverty

Members of Congress in States with Highest Poverty Least Likely to Support Anti-Poverty Measures

Members of Congress from states with high rates of poverty are less likely to support anti-poverty measures than other members of Congress, according to the 2007 Poverty Scorecard: Rating Members of Congress, released by the Shriver Center today. The Scorecard assigns letter grades to each member of the United States Senate and House of Representatives according to their voting records on the

Our Mission

The Sargent Shriver National Center on Poverty Law is a national law and policy center that takes action to end poverty through policy development, communications, and impact litigation.
